Meeting the challenges of Agriculture and Forestry with Commissioner Bob Odom

The Department of Agriculture and Forestry has issued emergency regulations to allow the start of a testing program for all imported Chinese crawfish and shrimp, according to Commissioner Bob Odom.

The regulations were triggered by recent findings in Louisiana of the antibiotic Chloramphenicol in shrimp and crawfish from China. The department received positive verification from a Canadian lab that 10 samples of Chinese crawfish and shrimp sent to the lab do contain the antibiotic Chloramphenicol.

"Of the 10 samples sent to Canada for testing, all were positive for Chloramphenicol and four of the ten were positive at levels exceeding 1 part per billion," Odom explained. "In fact, according to the lab, one particular sample of Chinese crawfish contained more than 20 parts per billion."

Chloramphenicol has been banned for use in food producing animals by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which has also adopted a zero tolerance policy toward the antibiotic.

"The procedure will be to require importers to have all Chinese product tested in approved laboratories. If it tests clean it will be allowed into the market for sale. We are gearing our analytical laboratory at LSU to handle up to 100 regulatory samples a day to verify the work of the outside testing," Odom said.

"Our research has shown that there may be significant quantities of these products entering U.S. commercial food channels without adequate safeguards," Odom said. "The European Union and Canada recently banned Chinese shrimp from their countries. Because of the ban China may be dumping product formerly going to those markets into the U.S."

"We will not require shrimp from other countries to be tested before being offered for sale, but we do intend to do random regulatory testing of shrimp from other countries to ensure there is no problem there," he said.

"Not only has the FDA banned the use of the antibiotic in food producing animals, it has also enumerated a number of health effects from human exposure to Chloramphenicol."

Chloramphenicol is a potent antibiotic developed in the 1950s. There are several toxic effects of the antibiotic. The most significant is the inhibition of the production of red blood cells by the bone marrow which can lead to a number of medical problems, primary among them aplastic anemia which, in susceptible humans, is irreversible and fatal, according to FDA literature.

The antibiotic is still used in very limited situations in humans, but only with strict medical supervision.

The world production of farm-raised shrimp has increased six fold in the last decade.

Farming of shrimp in China also has seen huge growth in recent years. Between 1999 and 2000, imports of Chinese shrimp into the U.S. doubled from 19.5 million pounds to 40 million pounds. About 20 percent of Chinese shrimp is farm-raised.

The greatly expanded farming of shrimp makes disease control a primary concern. "Because of the antibacterial potency of chloramphenicol it is known to be used for disease control in the highly intense Chinese shrimp farming operations and could be the cause of chloramphenicol's presence in commercially farmed shrimp," Odom said.

Other results verified by the Canadian lab include crawfish samples at 6.2 ppb, 4.6 ppb, .66 ppb, .41 ppb, .43 ppb, .55 ppb, .6 ppb and .96 ppb, and a shrimp sample at 5.9 ppb.

"If you combine the work our Ag Chemistry lab has performed with the work done in Canada, we have used three different tests and they all show that Chloramphenicol is in these samples," Odom said. "I'm not trying to scare anyone or hinder free trade, I simply want to protect the consumer from an antibiotic that has been found to cause adverse health effects."

Research associate Nina Hufstetler examines results from a gas chromatography electron capture detector test to determine if the antibiotic Chloramphenicol is present in Chinese crawfish and shrimp samples. The Department of Agriculture and Forestry is requiring all Chinese crawfish and shrimp to be tested for Chloramphenicol before it can be sold in Louisiana. Regulatory samples are being tested at the Ag Chemistry Lab on the LSU campus.

Don't wait until November to eat sweet potatoes

Turkey, cornbread dressing, pumpkin pie and of course yams are all traditional staple ingredients for a holiday meal.

However, the Louisiana Sweet Potato Commission is working on overcoming the stigma that yams or sweet potatoes are only for the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. In an order to help promote their commodity, the Louisiana Sweet Potato Commission has retained the help of Diane Allen and Associates, a Baton Rouge based advertising and public relations firm.

"Sure, I think most people do think more about sweet potatoes during the holidays, but our emphasis is on stressing the nutritional value, the taste and the availability of Louisiana yams year-round," said Nancy Steiner, a public relations executive with the firm. Steiner along with the Sweet Potato Commission is attempting to promote Louisiana sweet potatoes on several fronts.

The Commission is retaining the services of Holly Clegg, a well-known and local cook who regularly touts the taste and nutritional value of sweet potatoes in her cookbooks and during live-cooking appearances on T.V. and radio.

Something new to the campaign this year is "Yamster the Hamster," a cartoon character that can be found on literature at retail outlets and on the Commission's website (www.sweetpotato.org) which is geared towards educating and promoting sweet potatoes to kids.

"Sweet potatoes are a valuable source of nutrition for children and adults alike," Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Bob Odom said. "Using Holly to reach adults and Yamster for the children, I think we can effectively deliver the message that sweet potatoes are a year-round food."

Another avenue for marketing yams that the Louisiana Sweet Potato Commission is and has been studying is the restaurant, institution and school lunch programs.

"The state of North Carolina has been marketing their sweet potatoes to restaurants for years," said Sweet Potato Commission Chairman Ken Thornhill. "I believe we can make inroads to the food service sector here in Louisiana as well, it may take some capitol and investment but it would definitely pay-off."

One thing working in the commission's favor as far as promoting yams is the health aspect of the sweet potato. In fact, one study from the Center for Science in the Public Interest measured the nutritional value of sweet potatoes and discovered they are the most nutritional vegetable, beating out both broccoli and spinach.

Just like last year, it looks like the state will have average anywhere from 22,000 to 24,000 acres of sweet potatoes harvested this year.

What is certain is that if prices don't increase for sweet potatoes, producers will shift acres to other crops or just quit growing these tasty-tubers. Finding new markets promoting yams year-round is crucial if the state's sweet potato industry is to remain strong and alive here in Louisiana.

These are not new but the importance of each will be different this year.

The first, of course, is milk production. During 2001 milk production actually shrank. The U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) reported that annual U.S. milk production for 2001 fell 1.3 percent relative to 2000. Milk production is expected to grow 1-2 percent this year. This is based on a slight reduction in cow numbers and normal growth in milk production per cow. Of course, weather is always a wild card and if there is a long, hot summer, production may be down from the projection. A mild summer could result in a greater jump in production.

Demand for dairy products is the other side of the equation. Here the economy has been the big worry this year. The recession has translated into lower demand for milk and dairy products. This started last year with declines in the consumption of cheese and butter in the last quarter of 2001. During the first 11 months of 2001 consumption of dairy products relative to the same period, a year ago was as follows: butter down 3.5 percent, American cheese up 2.9 percent, other cheese down 4.8 percent, nonfat dry milk up 24 percent, and fluid milk products down 0.8 percent.

Some of this decrease in dairy product consumption was related to the events surrounding September 11th, some due to a slowing U.S. economy. In recent years, there has been steady increase in the consumption of cheese and other milkfat and milk solids. As a result of the increase in demand for milk, production has also increased over time. The growth in cheese and other milkfat and milk solids consumption has occurred in spite of the higher dairy prices seen during this period and in some instances at a rate greater than the growth of the population.

Some of the increase in demand can be attributed to the increasing trend of Americans to eat away from the home. Many of these products

June is Dairy Month

There are four factors that will have an impact on the dairy situation during 2002. In an effort to further stimulate the consumption of cheese, advertising became more prevalent with the slogan “Ahhh, the power of Cheese™.”

Finally, as the nation continued to react to the weakened economy, consumers began eating more meals at home. This has slowed the growth in the demand for dairy products.

Dairy demand in 2002 remains quite uncertain but is expected to absorb the projected production increase without too drastic price drops.

USDA is likely to lower the support price for nonfat dry milk sometime soon. This will lower fluid and Class II milk prices as well as Class IV prices. The Southeast will realize lower farm gate milk prices if the world price of nonfat dry milk pressures the domestic price down to the lower support level.

Imports and exports are becoming more important each year. Both Milk Protein Concentrates (MPC) and butter imports have been significant the last few years, and that has likely depressed domestic prices. At the same time, the U.S. is regularly exporting excess non-fat dry milk under the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP). This is adding to lower world prices for nonfat dry milk. Also, imports of butter in 2001 helped prevent wholesale U.S. butter prices from reaching $2-$3 per pound. While high butter prices sound good to dairy producers in the short run, they result in economic damage. First, high butter prices this summer will likely result in more consolidation in the ice cream business. Second, processors and consumers who were hurt by high wholesale/retail butter prices will look elsewhere for fat. That could harm the market for butter.

Farm prices for the first half of the year have been relatively strong. They have not been as high as 2001 but still above the five year average. Prices should be even stronger during the last half of the year as demand recovers with the economy.

Lagniappe Cookery... Cooking with milk

Spicy Cajun Bayou Grilled Cheese
4 tablespoons butter, softened
8 slices crusty, Italian bread
*6 tablespoons pepper jelly
8 slices Pepper Jack cheese
*2 links andouille sausage, grilled, each link cut into quarters and split lengthwise
8 slices Muenster cheese
Spread butter on one side of each slice of bread. Spread pepper jelly on the unbuttered slides of four slices of bread. On slices of bread with pepper jelly, place two slices of Pepper Jack cheese and two pieces of grilled andouille sausage over the jelly. Cover andouille sausage with two slices of Muenster cheese and top with the remaining slices of bread, buttered side out.
Preheat a large skillet or griddle over medium heat. Cook sandwiches in batches, if necessary, for 2 to 3 minutes per side or until golden and the cheeses are melted.

Spiced Peach Shortcake
Shortcake:
2 cups all-purpose flour
*½ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1-tablespoon baking powder
2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter
¾ cup buttermilk
*2 eggs, beaten

Filling:
*4 cups thinly sliced peaches
*¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons granulated sugar, divided
*1 cup whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
Preheat oven to 375 degree. Butter a 9-inch round cake pan. For shortcake, in medium bowl, combine flour, brown sugar, baking powder, pumpkin pie spice and salt. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add buttermilk and eggs, stirring just until dry ingredients are moistened. (Do not over mix.) Spread batter in pan. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pan and transfer to wire rack. For filling, in large bowl, combine peaches and ¼ cup sugar. Cover and refrigerate 30 minutes or until serving time. Whip cream with remaining 2 tablespoons sugar and vanilla until stiff peaks form. To serve, split shortcake in hal horizontally. Place bottom layer on serving plate, cut sides up. Top with half of the whipped cream and half of the peaches. Repeat layers, ending with fruit.

Grilled Basil Mustard Chicken
*¾ cup buttermilk
1/3 cup plain yogurt
*¼ cup honey
*3 tablespoons coarse ground Dijon-style mustard

2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or 2 teaspoons dried basil leaves
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
*6 boned and skinned chicken breast halves (about 1½ pounds)
In bowl, combine buttermilk, yogurt, honey, mustard, basil, salt and pepper; mix well. Reserve ¼ cup marinade, cover and refrigerate. Place chicken in large food-safe plastic bag; add marinade, turning to coat. Close bag securely. Refrigerate several hours or overnight, turning bag occasionally. To grill spray grid with cooking spray. Remove chicken from marinade; discard marinade. Place chicken on grid over medium-hot coals. Grill covered 12 to 16 minutes, turning frequently and brushing with reserved marinade, until juices run clear when chicken is pierced with a fork. Serve immediately.

Banana Maple Breakfast Blast
*2 cups milk
2 medium-size ripe bananas, peeled, cut into chunks, frozen
3 to 4 tablespoons maple-flavored syrup
Ground nutmeg or cinnamon
In blender container, combine 1 cup milk, bananas and syrup; blend until combined. Add remaining milk; blend until smooth. Pour into two glasses; sprinkle with nutmeg.
